

Court Review

THE JOURNAL OF THE AMERICAN JUDGES ASSOCIATION

Volume 44, Issue 3

2007-2008

EDITOR'S NOTE

This issue marks a transition of significance. For much longer than I've been editor, Professor Charlie Whitebread wrote an annual review of the past Term of the United States Supreme Court. He died in September, and we are left without his help in keeping up with the latest developments. We are also left without his great friendship, which is noted in a tribute on page 88. Because our readers and members have known Professor Whitebread for so long, we also note at page 128 a full obituary you can find online.

I am quite pleased that Professor Chuck Weisselberg of Boalt Hall, the law school at the University of California, Berkeley, has agreed to provide an annual review of the Court's criminal cases. Professor Weisselberg has a wealth of experience in teaching criminal law and procedure, including 11 years on the faculty with Professor Whitebread at the USC law school before Weisselberg headed to Berkeley in 1998. Weisselberg has crafted his review in ways that you will find helpful. Not only has he reviewed all of the key Supreme Court cases, he has also reviewed what early lower-court cases exist interpreting them. And he has previewed for us the key cases being argued in this Term. If any of our readers have suggestions of how to make these reviews even more useful, please let me know.

Our second article reviews the use of a new technology to monitor those accused or convicted of drunk driving while under court supervision. The new technology is a transdermal monitor, which can detect alcohol use from the skin and sends a report electronically if a person being monitored is using alcohol. Researchers Gene Flango and Fred Cheesman report that an early study shows that these devices are quite effective in preventing recidivism during the period of monitoring. They also recommend that combining treatment with the use of a 24-hour monitor like this has significant promise for changing offender behavior.

Our third article considers the intersection of laws allowing the use of marijuana for medical purposes and drug laws. Law student Cameron Mustaghim won the American Judges Association's annual writing competition with this article. Mustaghim specifically reviews the possible reasons that a person might have marijuana for medical purposes in his or her possession while driving a vehicle. He concludes that courts should reconcile laws permitting marijuana for medical purposes with other laws prohibiting drug possession by generally presuming that a person transporting marijuana is doing so for illicit purposes unless the drugs were purchased the same day.—Steve Leben

Court Review, the quarterly journal of the American Judges Association, invites the submission of unsolicited, original articles, essays, and book reviews. Court Review seeks to provide practical, useful information to the working judges of the United States and Canada. In each issue, we hope to provide information that will be of use to judges in their everyday work, whether in highlighting new procedures or methods of trial, court, or case management, providing substantive information regarding an area of law likely to be encountered by many judges, or by providing background information (such as psychology or other social science research) that can be used by judges in their work. Guidelines for the submission of manuscripts for Court Review are set forth on page 127. Court Review reserves the right to edit, condense, or reject material submitted for publication.

Court Review is in full text on LEXIS and is indexed in the Current Law Index, the Legal Resource Index, and LegalTrac.

Letters to the Editor, intended for publication, are welcome. Please send such letters to one of Court Review's editors: Judge Steve Leben, 301 S.W. 10th Ave., Suite 278, Topeka, Kansas 66612, e-mail address: sleben@ix.netcom.com; or Professor Alan Tomkins, 215 Centennial Mall South, Suite 401, PO Box 880228, Lincoln, Nebraska 68588-0228, e-mail address: atomkins@nebraska.edu. Comments and suggestions for the publication, not intended for publication, also are welcome.

Advertising: Court Review accepts advertising for products and services of interest to judges. For information, contact Deloris Gager at (757) 259-1864.

Photo credit: Mary Watkins (maryswatkinsphoto@earthlink.net). The cover photo is the Flathead County Courthouse in Kalispell, Montana. It was built in 1903.

©2008, American Judges Association, printed in the United States. Court Review is published quarterly by the American Judges Association (AJA). AJA members receive a subscription to Court Review. Non-member subscriptions are available for $35 per volume (four issues per volume). Subscriptions are terminable at the end of any volume upon notice given to the publisher. Prices are subject to change without notice. Second-class postage paid at Williamsburg, Virginia, and additional mailing offices. Address all correspondence about subscriptions, undeliverable copies, and change of address to Association Services, National Center for State Courts, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185-4147. Points of view or opinions expressed in Court Review are those of the authors and do not necessarily represent the positions of the National Center for State Courts or the American Judges Association. ISSN: 0011-0647.

Cite as: 44 Ct. Rev. ____ (2007-2008).